History is the study of the causes and consequences of changes in human events across time. Like other liberal arts disciplines, historical study trains students to think critically by reading, writing about, and discussing the human experience. History stimulates a deeper understanding of today's cultures by considering them in a global context. The study of history helps students develop powers of judgment and expression that will propel them to future leadership positions in public service, international organizations, communications, education, business, or the professions.

The department offers a broad-based Bachelor of Arts major, which includes foreign language requirements. It also offers two Bachelor of Science options. One emphasizes training in the social sciences and includes requirements in statistics as well as a minor in fields such as economics, political science, or sociology. The other option prepares students in such public history fields as museum administration, archival management, or historic preservation. The department also participates in a variety of interdisciplinary programs, including Asian studies, cinema studies, environmental studies, international affairs, Jewish studies, Latino/a studies, and women's studies.

All history majors take courses in European or world history, American history, and historical methods, as well as advanced courses in a range of historical eras and regions. Students focus their studies by choosing a cluster of four courses in a particular geographical area, time period, or theme. Majors complete their studies with two research seminars. Honors study is strongly encouraged for eligible students. Advanced undergraduates have the opportunity to participate in individual directed study with members of the faculty on topics of mutual interest. Cooperative education placements, fieldwork, internships, and other experiential learning activities are available.

The Department of History offers qualified undergraduates the opportunity to pursue a combined BA/MA or BS/MA degree in five years, upon the approval of the department. Students with a minimum 3.333 cumulative GPA and minimum 3.333 GPA in history may request admission to the five-year MA program in history. See department adviser for details.

Undergraduates who plan to teach in the public schools may combine history with education courses that can lead to state certification in Massachusetts. Those intending to teach in private secondary schools need not be certified by state authorities. Teaching positions in colleges and universities require advanced degrees at the graduate level. See pages 346–359 for course descriptions.

Human services is an interdisciplinary major that includes courses in human services psychology, sociology, and other fields. Students take basic foundation courses and skills courses and complete intensive fieldwork internships in Boston agencies. The major may lead to careers in many diverse areas of the helping professions or to graduate programs in social work, counseling, rehabilitation, and law. Students who major in human services select specialization areas such as: Deaf studies; family and children's services; psychology; counseling psychology; administration and policy; social justice, identity, and religion; and more. Students can pursue positions in both public and private agencies, including casework in social service and welfare agencies; therapeutic treatment in mental health settings; rehabilitation counseling; parole and court outreach work in programs for delinquent youth; staff work in halfway houses, drug treatment institutions, and penal institutions; community organizing; services for the aging at home and in institutions; administration in human services agencies; evaluation and grant writing for social programs; and counseling and support for Deaf clients through fluency in American Sign Language. Students in the major have special opportunities to participate in the Human Services Student Organization. See pages 344–346 for course descriptions.

The major in international affairs provides students with the opportunity to develop a deep understanding of both regional and global issues. It is intended to prepare students for the interdependent world in which they will live, work, compete, and cooperate upon graduation.

Students wishing to complete the major in international affairs take twelve courses; in addition, students must fulfill an International Experience requirement and the Bachelor of Arts core curriculum. Students majoring in international affairs should maintain a minimum 2.750 GPA until the beginning of their international experience. Current Northeastern students wishing to declare an international affairs major must have a minimum 2.750 GPA. See pages 359–360 for course descriptions.

The School of Journalism prepares students for careers in news media and related fields. The skills it emphasizes—writing, editing, video and audio production, design and graphics, and online reporting—also have broad applications in numerous other disciplines.

Students may enroll in either a five-year cooperative education program or a four-year program without co-op. The school strongly advises students to obtain cooperative education experience.

Graduates work for some of the world's best newspapers and magazines, radio and television stations, online publications, wire services, public relations departments, and advertising agencies. See pages 368–370 for course descriptions.
